CHIN UP!

BOSS BONES ANSWERS
YOUR PROBLEMS.

When I fight with my sister Emma she calls me an infected pig with varicose-veined legs! I don't know what to do!

— Jennifer Tierney, Co. Clare.
Try to avoid fights. Don't you know that violence is wrong?

I am the best fighter in my class. Some boys and girls don't like me. What should I do?

— Paul Hunter, Glasgow.
Beat them up.

I wear glasses and people make fun of me. Please help.

— Sarah May Naylor, Pudsey.
You're lucky. At least you've got a nose to balance glasses on.

My head looks like a turnip, my limbs look like twigs, and my body looks like a balloon. What shall I do?

— Joseph Taylor, Morecambe
How should I know? I'm a skeleton!

I've got a picture of Mary Lighthouse on my wall, but I have no darts to chuck at her. Please help.

— Chris Collins, Stockport.
Why would anyone want to chuck darts at such a nice lady? You horrible child! Tch!

Hello, readers -
Hope you're enjoying this issue of 'Oink', produced by the skeleton staff. Sorry about all the mistakes that seem to have crept in. We're doing our best to avoid any more.

THE ADVENTURE OF
BODGER THE BADGER
 ART CHAS STORY PATRICK GALLAGHER

1. Sunlight streamed through the willow trees as old Bodger knocked on the door of Rotty Rat's riverside home. But there was no answer.

2. "Anyone home?" queried the old badger as he gently pushed the door ajar. But all that greeted him was an eerie silence.

3. "My word! What has Rotty been up to?" exclaimed Bodger as he walked through the door. "The whole house looks as though it's been turned upside down!"

4. Bodger's eye caught a shadowy figure, shuffling shiftily by the curtains. "Is that you, Rotty, old chum?" he chirped inquisitively.

5. "Er... No..." came the rather hesitant reply as a large stoat appeared from the drapes. "He's just dropped by to see Grotty!"

6. "Ho-ho!" You mean Rotty? queried Bodger. "My word it must have been some time since you saw him last - you can hardly remember his name!"

7. "Er... yes!" replied the stoat smiling. "As he wasn't here when I arrived, I thought I'd give him a surprise by cleaning his place out!"

8. "I'm just going to take his silverware home to polish," he added. "The pleasure is all mine," replied Bodger cheerfully.

9. As soon as all the silverware was packed away Bodger let out a loud yawn. "WHOOAAAH! All that packing has tired me out!"

10. "Why not have a rest in Rotty's chair?" suggested the stoat. "This rope will prevent you from tumbling to the floor if you happen to fall asleep!"

11. "And I'll swat that noisy fly that keeps buzzing around the room with this frying pan." But the stoat's aim was far from perfect.

12. Bodger slept soundly for eight hours until an enraged Rotty woke him. "What's happened to my house?" he boomed angrily as he grabbed Bodger's lapels.

13. "You weren't here when I arrived," replied Bodger as Rotty untied his bonds. "So I helped your friend the stoat clean your place out."

14. Rotty turned purple. "GAAH! The reason I wasn't here, you blundering old buffoon, was because Froggy and myself have been preparing to send you on holiday!"

15. "I know! You're sending me to the seaside!" shrieked Bodger excitedly as Rotty and Froggy guided him into the strange contraption they'd toiled over all day.

16. "Correct! We're sending you to the Sea Of Tranquility," squealed Froggy. "You'll be over the moon!" added Rotty. And Bodger most certainly was. His holiday was out of this world.

4. "Grr! I'm fed up with you awkward talking objects!" snarled the Chief. "I'm going to the bank to cancel your wages!"

5. "Oh no, you're not!" came a loud voice. And the Chief found himself tripping up, with his pants around his ankles. "AAAGH!" he cried.

6. "Let's hope he's in a better mood when he wakes up!" giggled Terry the Trousers. "We really got the drop on him, didn't we?" chuckled Eustace the Underpants.

CAN YOU SPOT THE DELIBERATE MISTAKE I'VE MADE IN THIS ARTICLE, READERS?

The B B C have denied rumours that the long-running show 'Blue Peter' is to be dropped because the presenters are so boring. However, changes are to be made in an attempt to liven up the programme. Mark, Janet and Peter will now sit in a shoebox full of straw in the corner of the studio, and the programme will be introduced by George the tortoise.

The new Australian cookery book by Rolf Harris ('What do you do with a Didgeridoo?', published by Dinkum and Wallaby) contains recipes for Wombat Soup, Kangaroo Kidneys, Devilled Dingo droppings, and Coca-Koala. Rolf agrees that these meals may not be to everyone's taste, but says: 'They always cause a big sensation Down Under'.

RUSSELL GRUNT'S HOGOSCOPES

THIS ISSUE'S BIRTHSIGN — TAURUS THE WOTSIT, April 19th — March 32nd

My prediction for today is that you will wake up sometime, unless you stay asleep all day, in which case you won't be reading this, so it doesn't matter. You'll probably eat something this week, unless you're on a very strict diet, in which case I predict you'll feel pangs of hunger and think about creamcakes a lot. Something very interesting might happen later in the month, but then again it might not.

I further predict that you will read the 'Hogoscopes' column in 'Oink' comic, and you'll wonder why the predictions are so pathetic. You'll eventually figure out that Russell Grunt went on holiday with Uncle Pigg, so us skeletons had to make up something to fill this space, and we don't know anything about predicting the future, except to predict that Uncle Pigg will probably sack us all when he sees that we ran out of space before we finis
